

A New Year and a New Office

The furniture is brought in and then we get to play!

My client Carrie is starting the New Year off right with a new office for her therapy practice.

Dec. 31st was moving in day and like all moving in days there was some anxiety and feelings of being overwhelmed. The movers brought in the furniture and then we got to play!

I wanted Carrie to be in the power position both while sitting at her desk and when working with patients sitting in her "chair." Both pieces of furniture face the door and are facing into the room. Her desk falls in the Fame & Reputation part of the office and I'm sure a reputation of her special healing gifts will precede her. Her chair is in the Wealth corner, anchoring a thriving practice.

A new office with empowered placement of the furniture

We hung a few pieces of artwork to boost other areas as well. Two water pitchers are represented in the pictures in the Career corner and her diploma's will hang in the Wealth and Relationship corners, energetically embracing her from both sides of the room. She has a piece of artwork with Buddhist Prayer Flags which will be hung by the door in the Helpful People area of the bagua calling on her help from Heaven. A white blanket will boost the Creativity and Children area while a green bamboo anchors the wood element of the Family corner. A red lamp sits in the Knowledge area creating the constructive cycle of fire to earth energy, and two candles and a yellow orchid live in the relationship corner boosting both the earth and passion energies!

*Her desk and chair face the door.
The power position.*

The center of the room represents Health and is influenced by the element Earth. There is an earth and fire toned rug in the center of the room anchoring the balancing energy of Earth. All of the talk therapy will be directed into the center of the room, which is anchored in balance and well being!

Because Carrie's back is to the windows when sitting in her chair, she is going to hang a beautiful power crystal in the middle window for protection and to keep all her good energy in the room!

All of these cures are so simple and yet so powerful. When I left Carrie she was bounding about the door with a short shopping list, primarily for window covering, and a huge smile on her face!
