

Creating More Feminine Energy in an Office

Daydreamer and masculine energy

This beautifully designed office supports my client Mary who is a writer and speaker.

The office falls in the Helpful People area of the home which is ruled by the element Metal. This corner of the bagua is a masculine energy: expansive, reaching out into the world, working hard, bright, solid! All of these attributes are wonderful to have in an office and are reflected in Mary's furniture.

A rigid, square desk set up.

However, the desk is facing the French doors and windows, which can often times, create daydreamer energy. She could not see the door to the office so it's no surprise her family complained that you had to tip toe by when she was working.

Mary shared that when she started in the motivational speaking world, it was a male dominated field and she needed to anchor herself in that masculine energy. Hence, she bought this very masculine, solid desk; it has grounded her and served her well.

However, now, she is ready to be more receptive and more in the flow of her work rather than efforting so much. We are ready to call in more of the feminine energy. No more power suits; instead she prefers flowy skirts and beautiful blouses.

A slight angle creates a softer energy - more feminine.

We made some very minor adjustments to invite in the feminine energy by shifting her desk, turning it on a slight angle, which opened her up to the office door and turned her just a touch away from the windows. Now she has the whole Universe in her sights, inside and out. We can also now see and appreciate the more feminine details of this beautiful desk; a nice balance of the masculine and feminine.

Even the tree branches are flowy

It's always great to have a "mountain" behind you for protection, so Mary found this lovely tree, to hold the energy behind her. (Yes it's fake, can you believe it?! If you use fake plants make sure it looks real!) You'll also notice that she picked this tree specifically because of its flowing stems... there is nothing too rigid in this office now.

The Grandmaster of Feng Shui has said that your intention is more powerful than moving any object, so Mary and I set powerful intentions so that Mary is literally swimming in a pool of good energy!

I heard from Mary just three days later saying her agent contacted her with a new book idea (she already has three best sellers on the market). I thought this was a great affirmation for the powerful effects of Feng Shui. Then Mary proceeded to inform me that her agent of ten years has NEVER called her with an idea. She has always had to write a proposal, pitch an idea and beg them to publish it. She said it was truly an incredible opening!!! How thrilling it has been for me to support her growth and expansion using the principles of Feng Shui!
